DRINK AND LONG LIFE

LIFE INSURANCE RECORDS CONCERNING ALCOHOL.

Total Abstainers Much Safer Risks Than Moderate Drinkers—Hard Drinkers Cannot Get Insured—Highest Death Rate Among Those Engaged in the Liquor Trade.

The following extract from the Journal was shown by a New York World reporter to the actuaries of the two largest American life insurance companies:

The remarkable difference in favor of abstaining lives over those of moderate drinkers which has characterized the years' returns of the United Kingdom Temperance Insurance company for a quarter of a century, has been again exhibited. During last year in the non-abstaining section the actual death claims were 256, or 48 fewer than the expectancy. In the temperance section the actual death claims were 245, or 118 fewer than the expectancy. In other words, if the death rate of the abstainers had been the same as of the nonabstainers, instead of 245 there would have been 363 deaths, or 74 more, while if the death rate of the nonabstainers had been the same as of the abstainers there would have been 84 fewer deaths.

That is a very interesting statement for so high a medical authority to make. "All that a man hath will he give for his life," says Holy Writ, and it may be reasonably presumed that if mankind generally were positively assured of a longer life on condition that they totally abstained from drinking alcoholic liquors the ranks of the teetotalers would be swelled to formidable figures.

Is it true? There is a peculiar life insurance company in Great Britain which has no counterpart in the United States. It is the United Kingdom Temperance Insurance company, and it makes a specialty of dividing its policies into two classes—policies issued to total abstainers from alcoholic drinks and policies issued to nonabstainers. The nonabstainers are not intemperate persons; at least they are not at the time their policies are taken out, because no insurance company will write a policy upon the life of a man who either admits or upon medical examination is found to be using intoxicants to excess at the time he makes his application.

Every American life insurance company now puts a direct question to every applicant for a policy, something like this: Do you use alcoholic beverages? This inquiry has only been made to American applicants generally since 1875. Prior to that year a less direct form of inquiry was used, such as: Are you a person of sober and temperate habits? That kind of question was, of course, almost always answered "Yes," but many applicants regarded the word "temperate" as implying teetotalism, and qualified their replies by adding some such words as "Use liquors moderately." Since 1875, therefore, the American insurance returns furnish some valuable evidence on the question raised by The British Medical Journal.

Emory McClintock, the actuary of one of the two largest life insurance companies in the United States, has made a very careful examination of the records of all the policy holders of his company, classifying them as abstainers and nonabstainers. The main results of his examination are summed up by him as follows:

"Upon those who on entering stated that they abstained from alcoholic beverages the maximum expected loss was $5,465,669 and the actual loss was $4,251,060. Upon those who stated otherwise the maximum expected loss was $8,820,462, and the actual loss was $9,469,407. The abstainers show, therefore, a death loss of 78 per cent of the maximum and the nonabstainers 96 per cent.

one for men and another for women, and the women's rate is much lower than the men's. Why? Simply because all the actuaries' tables show that women live longer on an average than men."

Better Without Stimulants.

Bishop Tucker of central Africa has been giving his experience of teetotalism to a representative of The Young Man. "I have been a teetotaler for 20 years," he said. "So far from regretting it, I would not for a sence it sooner if I had the chance again. I find that in Africa not only is a teetotaler better fitted to cope with the climate, but he is better fitted for the great physical exercise which he has to undergo. I marched some 10,000 miles in Africa and have never felt the want of anything like a stimulant. Indeed I felt sure that if I had not been a teetotaler it would have been impossible to undergo the fatigue involved in some of the marching." The bishop, in his last pastoral visit, covered about 1,000 miles entirely on foot.—Selected.

Then and Now.

When Victoria was crowned, most English speaking people had liquors on their sideboard and used them freely. The abstainer was often pitied upon the defensive and sometimes flatly accused of gross dissimulation and often found his master opposed to his views, either openly or covertly. Almost all the colleges had liquors in the commissariat and other banquets, and to propose a wedding feast without wine would have seemed most unreasonable. Deplorable as the situation still is, it is vastly better than it was then, when statesmen were often little better than common drunkards, and great lawyers were frequently public spectacles.—The Christian Advocate.

Poisoned by Rum.

George Milne Scott, a lad of 12 years, son of a laborer in Aberdeen, Scotland, recently died from the effects of alcoholic poisoning. He secured temporary possession of a full bottle of rum and drank most of the contents. He was able to walk home, but became unconscious and died soon afterward.

Crime Due to Drink.

An analysis of the statistics of crime reported for the census of 1890 from the 15 largest cities in the United States showed 405,514 arrests during the year. Of these 389,787 were due to drink.

THE PINT OF ALE.

How John's Wife Laid the Foundation of Her Fortune.

It is a difficult matter to one accustomed to small daily indulgences to realize the expense thus incurred.

A Manchester calico printer was asked on his wedding day by his shrewd wife to drink only half a pint of ale a day as her share of home expenses. By economizing in this manner he was able to marry and well with that amount as she took the spare allowance each week for household expenses, and never forget the pint of ale John promised her.

When the first anniversary of their wedding came, and John looked around on his neat home and comely wife, a longing to do something to celebrate the day took possession of him.

"Mary, we've had no holiday since we were wed, and only that I haven't a penny in the world we'd take a jaunt to the village and see the mother."

"Would thee like to go, John?" she asked.

There was a tear with her smile, for it touched her heart to hear him speak tenderly, as in the olden times.

"If thee'd like to go, John, I'll stand treat."

"Have we the least, Mary? Hast got a fortin left thee?"

"Nay, but I've got the pint of ale," said she.

"Got what, wife?"

"The pint of ale," she replied.

Whereupon she went to the hearth, and from beneath one of the stone flags drew out a stocking, from which she poured upon the table the sum of 365 threepences ($22.81), exclaiming:

"See, John, thee can have the holiday."

"What is this?" he asked in amaze.

"It is my daily pint of ale, John."

He was conscience stricken as well as amazed and charmed.

"Mary, hasn't thee had thy share? Then I'll have no more from this day."

And he was as good as his word. They had the holiday with the old mother, and Mary's little capital, saved from "the pint of ale," was the seed from which, as the years rolled on, grew shop, factory, warehouse, country seat and carriage, with health, happiness, peace and honor.—Selected.

KEPT HIS PLEDGE.

A Reformed Drunkard Who Was Firm in His Resolve.

The lodge of Good Templars at Basle, Switzerland, has its meeting room provided free of cost by the local government, and in addition it receives the sum of 80 francs per annum to assist its work.

Several members of the lodge are reformed men. One very remarkable example was employed as an agent for a wine merchant and was regarded as a hopeless drunkard. In a sober hour he sought the help of the Good Templars, signed the pledge and was placed upon probation. Before he could become a member it was necessary that he should quit his employment. He did so and was assisted by some of the lodge members to an inferior position in the office of a merchant. He kept his pledge, advanced in his business, and is now a respectable member of the community. Soon after he joined the order he met with an accident and was carried to a hospital. His condition was critical and his weakness extreme. The attending physician ordered brandy and was about to place it to the patient's lips when he struck the glass from the doctor's hand, exclaiming, "No, I would rather die than ever touch again the stuff which made me so vile!"—Banner of Gold.

No Barley For Malt.

The Christian Scotsman, Glasgow, states that one day the late Mr. Joseph Sturge, a dealer in grain, met a drunken man and questioned him as to his condition. The man replied that he got drunk at such and such a public house, and he added, "The beer was made from your barley." This statement made Mr. Sturge pause and the next issue of The Manchester Express contained a notice from his firm that under no circumstances would they supply barley for malting purposes. It cost them $40,000 a year, but they had a clear conscience, and God blessed them.

Strike at the Foe.

Cry to our fatherland,
"Strike at the foe!"
Call on each noble hand,
"Strike at the foe!"
Wailings are rising from alleys and lanes,
Finding sad echo in valleys and plains,
Thrilling our hearts and inflaming our veins—
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!
Strike at the demon drink, blow upon blow!
Strike while the iron is hot, and the heart are aglow!
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!

Hordes of fatherland,
Strike at the foe!
This is a struggle grand,
Strike at the foe!
Sorrow stalks striding with grief reddened eyes,
Poverty chants her sad chorus of sighs,
Misery and Want fearfully cries,
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!
Strike at the demon drink, blow upon blow!
Strike and go forward and strike as you go!
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!

Patriots of fatherland,
Strike at the foe.
Fight with an iron hand,
Strike at the foe!
Commerce stands waiting for victory's hour,
Heaven is ready rich blessings to shower.
Virtue, once weak, will rise in her power.
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!
Strike at the demon drink, blow upon blow!
Strike, fiercely strike! Be not pitiful nor slow.
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!

Statesmen of fatherland,
Strike at the foe!
Shrink not, but firmly stand,
Strike at the foe!
Christians, arise in your terrible might,
Soldiers of temperance, the end is in sight,
Brothers, no cowards no longer, but fight.
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!
Strike at the demon drink, blow upon blow!
Strike, resting not till the curse is laid low!
Strike, strike, strike at the foe!
—International Good Templar.

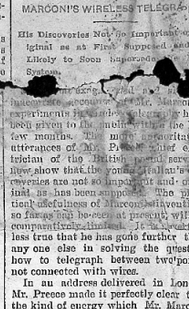
BY WAVES OF SOUND.

AUTHORITATIVE EXPLANATION OF MARCONI'S WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

His Discoveries Not So Important or Original as at First Supposed, and Not Likely to Soon Supersede Wire Systems.

[illegible] Marconi's experiments [illegible] have been given to the public within the last few months. The most authoritative utterances of Mr. Preece, chief electrician of the British postal service, have shown that the practical results and reveries are not so important and original as has been supposed. The practical usefulness of Marconi's invention, so far as can be seen at present, will be comparatively small. It is certainly less true that he has gone further than any one else in solving the question how to telegraph between two points not connected with wires.

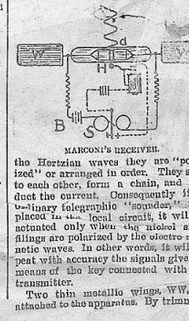
In an address delivered in London Mr. Preece made it perfectly clear that the kind of energy which Mr. Marconi employs is the electro magnetic wave, [illegible] discovered by Professor Righi, and is only a modified form of Hertz's radiator. Two brass balls, A and B, are fitted tightly into the ends of a cylinder containing vaseline (which is a good insulator). Directly opposite and almost in contact with each of these large spheres are two small brass balls, and the latter are made the terminals of the secondary circuit of a powerful induction coil. One strong battery or other source of electricity, E, is placed in the primary circuit, which also contains an ordinary Morse key, K. The turns of fine wire composing the secondary coil are so much more numerous than those of the primary that the current induced in the former has a very high voltage or penetrating power. It would leap an air gap of at least six inches. So long as the key is open nothing happens, but when it is closed and the primary circuit is complete the secondary begins sparking with amazing rapidity, and a set of electro magnetic waves, about 250,000,000 per second, are thrown out sidewise from an imaginary line connecting the centers of the big spheres, let us say at D. The zigzag line which Mr. Preece has drawn on the underside of the cylinder is not intended to represent a wire, but the series of invisible electro magnetic waves.



MARCONI'S TRANSMITTER.

The most original part of Mr. Marconi's apparatus is his receiver, or relay. While it works on the same principle as Hertz's resonator it introduces a new feature. It is something more than a mere ring, carefully "tuned" to respond to vibrations of a certain frequency. In a sealed glass tube an inch and a half long and perhaps a quarter of an inch in diameter he inserts two cylindrical bits of silver, separated at their bases by half a millimeter, or about one-fiftieth of an inch. The outer ends of the silver "pole pieces" are connected with wires that pierce the glass. The tube is made airtight, and a high vacuum is created within it. But before these last two steps are taken the space between the butt ends of the silver pieces is filled with a mixture of fine nickel and silver filings, to which a trace of mercury has been added.

Now, if a "local" battery, B, such as is used in every country telegraph office, be connected with the apparatus, and an attempt be made to send a current through the latter, there will be no success unless the tube should be exposed sidewise to the electro magnetic waves sent off by Mr. Marconi's transmitter. Except at such times the filings act like an insulator. The tiny particles lie in disorder, or "higgledy piggledy," as Mr. Preece says. But when they come within the influence of these waves they are "polarized" or arranged in order. They stick to each other, form a chain, and conduct the current. Consequently if an ordinary telegraphic "sounder," S, is placed in the local circuit, it will be actuated only when the nickel silver filings are polarized by the electro magnetic waves. In other words, it will repeat with accuracy the signals given by means of the key connected with the transmitter.



MARCONI'S RECEIVER.

Two thin metallic wings, WW, are attached to the apparatus. By trimming these to the proper size the receiving instrument is attuned to the transmitter. If a crowbar is dropped on a pavement, it will ring out a certain note. Vary the amount of metal in it, and you change the note.

When an induction coil powerful enough to give a inch spark is used with the transmitter, Marconi's receiver will pick up the signals from a distance of [illegible] feet. With [illegible] Marconi's method is not likely to displace Morse's for general service. It seems to be best suited to secret communication in time of war, to long signaling or telegraphing to lighthships or islands lying several miles off shore.—New York Tribune.

NEW STEEL DISCOVERED.

Said to Contain About Twenty-five or Twenty Per Cent of Nickel.

The manufacture of nickel steel will probably be revolutionized by a new process just invented in Pittsburg. A company has already been formed by well known local capitalists, and the new product will shortly be turned out in large quantities.

The process is patented by W. J. Williams, a well known steel worker. No patents have been taken out by the inventor, so he feared his secret would thus be learned by others and endless litigation might result. Careful analyses were made of the finished product by chemists, but they were unable to discover how the steel was made or the proportions of the different materials, as many of the substances had been changed by the farmer's heat.

It is claimed that the new steel contains from 25 to 30 per cent of nickel to the steel. Heretofore not more than from 3 to 4 per cent of nickel to the steel has been obtained by those engaged in the manufacture of it. The tests made showed that the Williams steel increased in strength and hardness to the point where 25 per cent of nickel was used, and from point to 25 and 30 per cent each addition of nickel made the product softer. This variation in the softness or hardness, they claim, is no disadvantage, as the steel will thus become suited to various purposes.

They claim that with the new steel knives may be made just as hard as now, with the additional advantage that they will never rust. The softer steel will be used for the spokes for bicycles, and a large trade is expected to be developed on this class of work.

The advantage gained by the new steel is that much less steel than ordinary can be used and yet have much greater strength.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Great Engineering Scheme.

One of the most important electrical engineering schemes on record, by which power is to be conducted from Santa Ana to Los Angeles, a distance of 30 miles, under a pressure of 33,000 volts, is now in process of consummation. It is proposed to deliver electrical energy equivalent to 4,000 horsepower in the car houses at Los Angeles. The power station is in Santa Ana canyon, 12 miles from Redlands and 30 miles from the point of development. The current will be generated at 4,000 volts and transformed up to 33,000. The power is derived from the water of the Santa Ana river, which is to be diverted from the stream by a canal, flume and tunnel work along the side of the canyon to a point where it suddenly drops through 2,200 feet of pipe, a distance of 700 feet, to the water wheels.—Electrical Review.

Aluminum Coated Sheets.

A middle west galvanized iron manufacturing company is producing steel sheets coated with aluminum, which, it is claimed, are superior to and more durable than galvanized iron, tin plate or planished iron for many purposes for which these materials are now generally used. The special advantages of these coated sheets are stated to be that they can be worked and soldered without peeling, the coating adhering absolutely to the sheet, can be easily soldered, will resist the action of sulphurous gases, and can be heated to a red heat without destroying the coating. Moreover, they can, when desired, be polished to a luster equal to burnished silver or nickel.—Popular Science News.

Expensive Metals.

Charcoal thread used as filaments in electric lamps costs about $12,000 a pound, but an authority states that gallium is vastly more expensive than the carbon filament, 1½ grains of it being worth $25, or about $100,000 per pound. He also furnishes a list of the rarer metals, with their approximate prices per pound:

Lithium and thorium	$10,000
Rhodium and iridium	6,000
Didymium and rubidium	4,000
Palladium and ruthenium	3,000
	2,000
Ruthenium and vanadium	1,000
Cerium	Stone

A Contract From Australia.

It is announced that the Pennsylvania Tube works have received the contract for 100 miles of 12 inch lap welded steel pipe and 300 miles of 30 inch riveted steel pipe. The weight will be about 20,000 tons, and the order is said to be the largest ever made at one time. The pipes are to carry water to the Coolgardie mines, Australia.—American Machinist.

Key In the Doorknob.

In a recently designed door lock the key fits into the end of the doorknob, and there is no other keyhole.

Rapid Building.

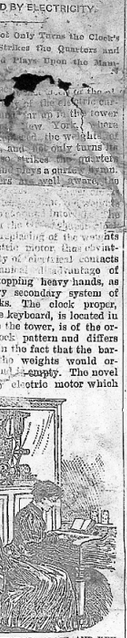
In Chicago recently the steel skeleton for a nine story building was erected in 29 days.

NOVEL TOWER CLOCK.

THE FAMOUS GRACE CHAPEL CHIMES OPERATED BY ELECTRICITY.

The Current Not Only Turns the Clock's Wheels, but Strikes the Quarters and the Hours and Plays Upon the Mammoth Chimes.

"One Current Not Only Turns the Clock's Wheels, but Strikes the Quarters and the Hours and Plays Upon the Mammoth Chimes." This is a quotation from the journal in question, which is a very good one, as it describes in a few words the novel feature of the Grace Chapel clock, which, in fact, is the only one of its kind in the world. The clock, which is located in the tower of Grace Chapel, New York, has been described in the newspapers, but the novelty of the system has escaped attention. As an electrician, I am well aware that the mechanism is all an advantage of starting and stopping heavy hands, as at the ordinary secondary system of operating clocks. The clock proper, which, with the keyboard, is located in a small room in the tower, is of the ordinary tower clock pattern and differs from this only in the fact that the barrel on which the weights would ordinarily be wound is empty. The novel feature is a tiny electric motor which is carried upon an extension of the base upon which the "works" are placed.



ELECTRIC SELF WINDING CLOCK AND KEYBOARD.

The motor shaft carries a small grooved pulley from which a coiled wire belt runs to a friction pulley on the rotor or shaft of the escapement gear, which is thus subjected to a steady pull, answering to the pull of the weights in an ordinary clock. Every movement of the escapement allows the shaft to rotate the required amount, and the resulting movements of the clock are transmitted by light hollow shafting to the tower clock dials. A cam on the minute shaft makes an electrical contact once a minute and sends a current to a contact disk on the hour shaft. The disk is furnished with four contact points, which operate every quarter of an hour, to throw in a magnetic clutch and start the "Westminster chimes" barrel, which is in the lower right hand corner of the clock. This barrel is similar to those which are used in a music box, being furnished with a number of pins which operate similarly to those of a music box cylinder. They do not strike the teeth of a comb, however, but serve to lift a series of small electric keys and pass successive currents through a series of wires which lead up to the chimes in the belfry.

Beneath the ten bells are placed ten powerful solenoid magnets, one to each bell. Each of these consists of an iron armature, which hangs, when the magnet is not charged, just within and above the solenoid coil. When the pins of the rotating barrel below strike a key, a current is passed through the solenoid coil in the tower, and the armature is pulled violently down within the coil. The chain by which the armature is hung runs up over a pulley and attaches to the clapper of the bell, which is thus caused to make one stroke for every count.

A similar mechanism to that above described is used to throw in a wooden cylinder or barrel at 9 o'clock every evening, which plays what is known as the curfew by one and after the hymn is played the clock remains silent through the night, in order that the neighborhood may not be disturbed by the bells.

In addition to the automatic mechanism for striking the quarter chimes, the hour and playing the curfew a separate keyboard is provided in the small room at the base of the tower in which the clock mechanism is located. It is carried in a boxlike structure, shaped something after the fashion of a reed organ, and it is used every morning at 9 o'clock for playing a hymn tune by hand, and also at the regular Sunday services. This keyboard has electrical connection with the magnets in the tower and operates in the same manner as the apparatus already described. In case there should be any breakdown in the electrical connections, or failure of the current, each of the connecting chains between the magnets and the bells is furnished with a wooden lever which is hinged to the frame of the magnet box. This arrangement is the same as is used in the ordinary tower chimes for tune playing.

The chime consists of ten Meneely bells, the largest of which weighs about 3,000 pounds and the smallest 250 pounds, and to strike a sufficiently powerful blow on a bell weighing a ton and a half requires a considerable amount of force. As a matter of fact a pull is exerted equivalent to between three and four horsepower, and to secure this the main current from the dynamo is thrown on by means of the relay box, which is attached to the wall of the tower. The cost of the current for running the motor is estimated at 1 6-10 cents per day, and the clock has proved to be a reliable timekeeper.—Scientific American.

"Joe Tucker" Heard From.

FALLING RUN, MD., Aug. 23, 1897.
—Mr. Editor:—Our crop of chinquapins and shellbarks is grand, and with huckleberries to sell we expect to make a "right good out" this year.

Just think of it! Thurmont has received a donation from Baltimore of 67 fresh air children. Good luck to the little scions. Let them breathe the pure and undulated air that is filled with that dolce farina for which the region roundabout Thurmont is noted. There may be a future Republican president in the gang. Of fresh air chaps, however, hereabout, we have a plenty. I can point to one father who is blessed with nigh upon a dozen of big fat, fresh and frisky rough-and-tumble tots as you can find in any poor man's mountain home, and still they come fresh!

Prosperity is all the go now! That is why we laugh. In order to protect themselves from sin, sorrow and the great big Bryan silver strike, some of our Democratic sympathetic silver friends are on a skedaddle to the woods like rats from a burning barn.

There is a ripple of excitement here. Mr. Joshua Moser got "shot" in Boonsboro a few days ago. The affair no doubt was premeditated. Squire Wolf and the police should investigate the matter on hand.

A serious cutting affray occurred at the rear of Mr. George W. Bittle's store a few days ago, during the visit of my friend, Rev. Elmer Bittle. As the Rev. was not an eye witness to the catastrophe he was not much disturbed or agitated over it. His appetite was good and digestion perfect.

It is reported as truth that on the F. & M. railroad a combination car full, two trailers loaded with wheat ran off the bridge near the fountain at Reifsnyder's. Fortunately no one was hurt, as it hugged the rail like sixty.

Considering the present status of the silver market the ardent admirers of the matchless W. Jennings Bryan should, sooner or later apply to him for comfort. He may yet invent something more tangible to cling to in 1900. But (stick a pin here) 1900 ends in naught. Naught from naught and naught remains the figures in arithmetic say.

O, hush! Too bad, the assault upon the "Girl About Town" while being transported to the heights amid watermelons, bales of leather and sich on the combination car. Mary Jane don't go behind the bush to say things straight. That's right, give it to the big syndicate good. Yours, etc.,

JOE TUCKER.

What a Lie.

From a Covington (O.) Gazette:

"It takes money to run a newspaper."—St. John (Kan.) News.

What an aggregation; what a whopper. It has been disproved a thousand times; it is a clean case of sixty nancy. It doesn't take money to run a newspaper; it can run without money. It is a charitable institution, a begging concern, a highway robber. B'Godfrey the newspaper is the child of the air, a creature of a dream. It can go on and on and on, when any other concern would be in the hands of a receiver and wound up with cobwebs in the window. It takes wind to run a newspaper; it takes gall to run a newspaper. It take a scintillating, acrobatic imagination, and half dozen white shirts, and a railroad pass to run a newspaper. But money—Heavens to Betsy and six hands round, who ever needed money in conducting a newspaper! Kind friends are the assets for such enterprises—kind words and church social tickets. When you see an editor with money, watch him. He'll be paying bills and disgracing his profession. Never give money to an editor. Make him trade it out. He can't swap. Then when you come, having stood around for years, sneered at the editor and his business, jim crow paper, be sure and have your wife send in for three copies by one of your weeping children, and when she reads the generous and touching notice about your forewarn her to neglect to send fifteen cents to the editor. It would overwhelm him. Money is a corrupting thing. The editor knows it and what he wants is your heartfelt thanks. Then he can thank the printers and they can thank their grocers. Take your job office and then come ask for half rates for church notices. Get your lodge letter heads and stationery printed out of town, and then flood the editor with beautiful thoughts in resolutions of respect and cards of thanks. They make such spicy reading, and when you pick it up filled with those glowing and vivid mortuary articles, you are so proud of your little paper! But money—scorn the filthy thing. Don't let the pure, innocent editor know anything about it. Keep that for sordid tradespeople who charge for their wares. The editor gives his bounty away. The Lord loves a cheerful giver. He'll take care of all the editors. Don't worry about the editor. He has a charter from the state to act as a doormat for the community. He'll get the paper out somehow; and stand up for you when you run for office, and lie about your pigeon toed daughter's tackey wedding, and blow about your big-footed sons when they get a $4 per week job, and weep over your shriveled soul when it is released from your grasping body, and smile at your giddy wife's second marriage. He'll get along. The Lord alone knows how—but the editor will get there somehow.

Cascarets stimulate liver, kidneys and bowels. Never sicken; weaken or gripe. 10c.

No Perfect Materials.

If nature or art furnished perfect material; if mass, in all respects, was absolutely homogeneous; if steel—the steel of commerce—was what it purports to be, of uniform consistence throughout the beam or bar or molded form; if wrought iron was free from slag, sand bars, seams, fire cracks and imperfect welds, and always cold short, or red short or neither; if cast iron never had any blowholes, never was dense on one side and porous on the other, never shrunk unevenly, so that pulley bans pulled off from the hub in the mold never went out into the world tense drawn with internal strains or weakened with cold shuts; if, in fact, in the leading manufactories of the country, such as the Edgar Thomson works, flywheels of uniform consistence flying apart, wreck the works and scatter ruin, destruction and death in their path, then material might be tested, not, indeed, in conformity with the assumptions of crude, immature hypothesis, but in accordance with the determined principles of a well developed theory. Steel could then be tested as steel generically, and iron as iron. But as things are, with their unknowable variations and contrarieties, every piece must be treated specifically. It is a law unto itself, and security demands its individual inspection.—N. P. Gladis in "Age of Steel."

Bees' Venom as a Remedy.

A novel undertaking in the manufacture of drugs has been begun by two young pharmacists who have commenced the extraction of the poison from honey bees. They have two different ways of collecting. The bees are caught and held by the abdomen in a small glass tube until the poison sacks have been emptied. In the second they are placed in a bottle on wire netting and enraged until the tiny drops of venom fall into the alcohol which fills part of the bottle. This venom is said to be a remedy for cancer, rheumatism, snake bite and a hundred other ills of humanity.—Medical Press.

Sometime.

Sometime, we shall know why
Our sunniest mornings change to noons of rain;
And why our steps are shadowed so by pain,
And why we often lie
On couches sown with thorns of care and doubt;
And why our lives are made to bear about
With pains that put our loftiest plans to rout.

Sometime, we shall know why
Our dearest hopes are swept so swift away,
And why our brightest flowers first decay:
Why young is lost in sigh,
Why clasping fingers slip so soon apart—
Estrangement, space, and death rend heart from heart,
Until from deepest depths the tear-drops start.

Sometime, we'll shall know
Each other, aye, as we ourselves are known,
And see how out of darkness light has grown;
And He—who loves us so,
Despite our wilfulness and blind complaint,
Will show us how His kind and calm resistant
Can mould a human soul into a saint.

Sometime, our eyes shall see
Clear living to the day at dawn,
While silvery echoes follow thunders bend
Sometime, our hearts shall be
Content, forgetting all our restless moods,
And knowing everything has worked for good—
The how, and when, and why, be understood.

VISITED BLACK ROCK.

A Number of Young People Visit the Mountains to View This Wonderful Work of Nature.

On Tuesday last a party of thirteen young persons drove from here to the Black Rock, which is situated along the historic South Mountain, about one and a half miles west of Wolfsville. They left Myersville shortly after noon, and, arriving at Pleasant Walk, a guide was secured for the remainder of the journey. The heavy rain of the previous evening had torn the roads so badly as to make them almost impassable, and it was with much difficulty that the teams were gotten up the mountain, the entire party walking part of the distance, and several of the ladies and gentlemen the entire distance from Pleasant Walk. Arriving at the Black Rock Springs, the teams were left there and the crowd proceeded to the Rock. The atmosphere was very hazy and obscured the beautiful scenery to be had from there, but this magnificent and stupendous work of nature was itself a grand and inspiring sight in itself, elicited many exclamations of and admiration. After spending wonder, but while on the summit the party descended to the foot of the Rocks and continued on down across the meadows, from where a perfect view could be had of the great natural curiosity towering in all its grandeur hundreds of feet above their heads. After spending about two hours in the vicinity they returned to the springs and started for home. Much difficulty was again experienced in getting out of the mountain, and they arrived in Myersville at about 8 o'clock, p. m., very tired but highly gratified with the trip.

Those in the party were Miss Nellie Cole, of Frederick, Misses Lulu Wachtel, Eva Hoke, Jennie Harp, Edith Zimmerman and Annie Pohlenberger; Messrs. Edward A. Laing and F. D. Mowen, of Reinfield, N. J., Albert J. Harp, Melvin F. Shepley, Clarence Zimmerman, G. Emerson Mowen and Waldo R. Mowen.

KEEP your blood pure, your appetite good, your digestion perfect by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which has power to keep you WELL.

NEW ROAD NOTES.

Directors of the Proposed Electric Road to Meet Those of the F. & M. Road.

The directors of the proposed Electric Railroad between here and Middletown will meet the directors of the Frederick & Middletown Railroad in Frederick on Monday next, and at this meeting definite arrangements looking toward an early start in the construction of the road will be made.

President Geo. Wm. Smith, of the F. & M. Road, accompanied by an experienced engineer, will look over the route already surveyed between here and Middletown, next week.

Missed the Boat.

The Bay Ridge Excursion from Frederick on Wednesday of last week accompanied by the Nation[illegible] Band, of this place, did [illegible] Baltimore [illegible] boat, so the excursionists had to wait in Baltimore until afternoon.

Passed the Bar.

Mr. J. Frank Betts, son of Isaiah Betts, of near Middletown, formerly of this place, passed a very creditable examination made by the committee as attorney at law. He began the course under A. C. Strite, Esq., of Hagerstown, and later with John C. Motter, Esq., of Frederick, and remained with him until the course was completed.

Resulted Fatally.

E. Gregg Eichelberger, who was struck by a Western Maryland passenger train at Graceham crossing, Frederick county, on the afternoon of August 2, died at the City Hospital, Baltimore, last Friday morning. His death was directly due to concussion of the brain. His collar-bone and several of his ribs were also broken.

Remsburg Reunion.

On Monday last Rev. W. L. Remsburg and family attended a reunion of the children of the late Daniel Remsburg, at the residence of Ezra Remsburg, at Middletown. Among those present were Chas. P. Remsburg wife and sister Jennie, of Springfield, O; Ezra Remsburg and family. Mr. Chas. Remsburg, wife and sister Jennie left for Springfield Monday afternoon.

Bees in Church.

The congregation of the Christian Church at Redland, this county, of which Rev. Mr. Rayfield is pastor, had an experience on Sunday the 15, that somewhat disturbed the serenity of the service. A bee got into the low quartered shoe of the Sunday school superintendent, who was worshiping devoutly in his pew. The little insect stung him severely. After he had liberated it, another flew into the church and lit on the parsons head and stung him. The two bees were only the vanguard of the swarm of them that soon entered the church, and made a general assault. Dozens of those in the church were stung. It was sometime before the intruders were driven out and order restored.

A Great Project.

Railroad men manifest much interest in the plans of the Baltimore, Cincinnatti and Western Railway Company, which has placed on record in Baltimore a mortgage for $18,000,000 to secure an issue of eighteen thousand $1,000 five per cent. gold bonds, dated March 1, 1897, to be redeemable fifty years hence. The project is to run a line between Baltimore and Cincinnatti, through the states of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Ohio. The proposed route passes through several counties in Maryland, including Frederick. A copy of the mortgage was filed in the clerk's office in Frederick Saturday and is the largest ever put on record there.

A Desperate Darkey.

Hary Jeans, colored, was arrested in Frederick last Saturday night by Policeman Stone and Deputy Game Warden Stroup, of New Market district, and given over to County Constable Simpson, charged with assault and highway robbery on Wm. Stewart. The assault took place Saturday night on the Baltimore pike near the Monocacy bridge. Stewart was overtaken by Jeans, who asked permission to ride, which was given. The colored man struck Stewart across the face with the buggy whip and threatened to kill him if he did not give up his money. In the scuffle the colored man secured three one dollar notes and some silver, but dropped the notes, which were afterward found by County Constable Simpson. Jeans was given a hearing on Monday before Magistrate White, and was held in the sum of $150 bail on the charge of assault with intent to rob, and in the sum of $50 on the charge of resisting arrest. Not being able to furnish the required bail he was committed to jail for the action of the grand jury.

A Remarkable Cure of Chronic Diarrhoea.

In 1862, when I served my country as a private in Company A, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, I contracted a chronic diarrhoea. It has given me a great deal of trouble ever since. I have tried a dozen different medicines and several prominent doctors without any permanent relief. Not long ago a friend sent me a sample bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after that I bought and took a 50 cent bottle; and now I can say that I am entirely cured. I cannot be thankful enough to you for this great Remedy, and recommend it to all suffering veterans. If in doubt write me. Yours gratefully, HENRY STEINBERGER, Allentown, Pa. Sold by George W. Bittle, Myersville; T. F. Bittle, Ellerton; J. H. Maugans, Wolfsville.

FLIGHT OF A BANKER.

Wm. A. Mansfield, Accused of Violating the Internal Revenue Law, Secures His Papers and Valuables and Mysteriously Disappears.

Information was lodged with Deputy United States Marshal E. Y. Goldsborough on Thursday of last week by Internal Revenue Collector M. R. Hawkins against Wm. A. Mansfield, a banker and broker of Frederick, who is accused of violation of the internal revenue laws by selling cigars out of an old box, which were of a different brand. He is also accused of selling certain brands of cigarettes in boxes bearing the brands of other makers. Mansfield conducted a little cigar stand in connection with his brokerage office. He admitted to the officers that he had sold the cigars as charged, but said he was selling very much inferior cigars. Last Friday afternoon for particulars. About a week before he made an effort to purchase some "Grand Flora" cigars of Mr. H. E. Kline, a cigar manufacturer, and being unable to effect the deal, it is alleged, procured some old boxes of the desired brand and placed inferior cigars in them. Learning of this, Mr. Kline notified the deputy internal revenue collector, who placed the case in the hands of U. S. Marshal Goldsborough. While the necessary papers were being prepared to make an arrest Mansfield quietly collected all of his things together and left the city. He bought a ticket to Bruceville, Md., over the Pennsylvania Railroad at 3 o'clock p. m., and at that station purchased a through ticket to Philadelphia. When he failed to return to return to his home on Thursday night his wife, who is a Frederick county lady, went to his office and was surprised at the state of affairs. She was much distressed and unable to account for his strange actions, as he failed to inform her of leaving the city. Mr. Mansfield appeared in Frederick several years ago and opened a banking and brokerage business. He seemed to have plenty of money and almost any respectable-looking person could borrow small sums of five or ten dollars on an individual note. At the same time he advertised for deposits upon which he allowed 6 percent for daily balances. He soon commenced to do a fair business, as it is alleged he had about 150 depositors, mainly laboring people, who had to their credit sums ranging from five to twenty dollars. How much of this money he had on hand when he left no one seems to know. John R. Crawford, a laboring man, swore out an attachment for $30, representing the balance he had to his credit in Mansfield's hands. Werthemer Bros. also swore out an attachment for money owed the firm for cigars, but the Central National Bank had already attached the office effects for three months' rent.

Attending Fairs.

Mr. D. Edward Renover, residing at the fountain east of Middletown, left last week with two herd of 21 Herford cattle for Syracuse, N. Y., where he will exhibit the stock at the fair there. He will be absent for 60 days and in that time will exhibit his Herfords at a number of fairs. He will reach home in time for the Frederick and Hagerstown fairs.

A Habitual Drunkard.

A jury was summoned last Saturday morning to inquire into the condition of Mrs. Lavinia C. Huffer, wife of John Huffer, Lappans. C. D. and J. E. Wagaman represented Mr. Huffer; W. H. A. Hamilton for Mrs. Huffer. The jury decided that Mrs. Huffer was a habitual drunkard and not capable of taking care of herself. No witnesses testified, Mrs. Huffer's attorney acknowledging the charge. Judge Stake will send her to a suitable institution until she is cured.

Honest Farmers.

A Frederick county farmer delivered to a dealer in Frederick last Friday 1,600 bushels of wheat, for which he was paid at the rate of 70 cents a bushel, to be delivered August 20. There was no written agreement but the wheat was delivered as contracted for. A number of other farmers had their entire crops to deliver this month which they sold at 65 to 67 cents per bushel. Written contracts were made in no instance, but the farmers say they feel in honor bound to live up to their word, notwithstanding the temptation of the rise in the wheat market.

Aged Footprints.

Dr. James A. Mitchell, of Mt. St. Mary's College, Emmittsburg, has presented to Dr. Philip Uhler, for the Peabody Institute, Baltimore, a large slab of sandstone bearing the footprints on the red sandstone of the ancient shore of the Jura Trias. He has also presented one of a similar description to Prof. A. Bibbins, of the Woman's College, of Baltimore, for the use of students in that institution. Dr. Mitchell says that the dinosaur which made the footprints walked over the soft sand on the ancient shore probably ten millions of years ago.

Mr. James Plunkard, of near Walkersville, this county, has lost in all eleven head of cattle from rabies.

It is always gratifying to receive testimonials for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and when the the endorsement is from a physician it is especially so. "There is no more satisfactory or effective remedy than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes Dr. R. B. Robey, physician and pharmacist, of Olney, Mo.; and he has used the Remedy in his own family and sold it in his drug store for six years he should certainly know. For sale by George W. Bittle, Myersville; T. F. Bittle, Ellerton; J. H. Maugans, Wolfsville.

A DEAD BODY FOUND.

Wm. Smith of Near Woodsboro, Found Dead in a Lime Kiln—Thought to Have Fallen Up.

Early on last Sunday morning the dead body of William Smith, a resident of near Woodsboro, this county, was found lying dead at the bottom of an embankment at Samuel Barrick's lime kiln, with every appearance of having fallen there during the night before. Smith was between sixty and seventy years of age, and lived near the lime kilns for a number of years past, working for the Lecore lime works. He was last seen on Saturday evening near the kilns and those who know him are of the opinion that he wandered to the top and while there was seized with a faintness and fell over the embankment, a distance of about twenty-five feet. The unfortunate man fell on his [illegible] and [illegible] instantaneously [illegible] death. An ugly cut on the top of his head was among the injuries he received.

While the prevailing opinion is that Smith fell over the embankment, the place is regarded as a dangerous section and it might have been that he was knocked over.

THE WORK OF DEATH.

PALMER.—On Sunday, 15 inst., Mr. Lawson Palmer, a former well known and respected resident of Middletown Valley, died at his home in Easton, Pa., aged 70 years, the eldest son of the late Jacob Palmer. In 1856 he married Margaret Stotelmyer, of Wolfsville, this valley, and spent the next eight years in Indiana. Returning to Middletown valley in 1864 he dwelt near Ellerton until 1882, when he removed to Easton, Pa., where he has since resided. He is survived by his wife and two sons—J. A. Palmer, chief assayer of the Henna, Lead Co., in Carnegie, near Pittsburg, and A. C. Palmer, a teacher in St. Luke's School, Philadelphia. He also leaves four brothers and one sister. His funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon following, interment in Easton Cemetery.

SHAW.—Mrs. Wm. Show, an aged lady of near Bolivar, died on Wednesday last of dropsy. A grown son and daughter survive her.

The Fairs.

Secretary Harry C. Keefer, of the Frederick County Agricultural Society, and his assistants are busy receiving and answering applications for space filled by exhibitors, letters from horsemen with fast flyers to enter the races, and communications from owners of attractions of various kinds who desire to secure engagements for the fair. Many fine features will be obtained by the management this year, and owing to the prosperity among the farmers it is thought that the fair will be larger and better than ever before.

The Agricultural and Mechanical Association of Washington county will hold its annual fair at Hagerstown on October 12, 13, 14 and 15. This will be the forty-second annual exhibition, and a supreme effort is being made by the Association to make it bigger, better and brighter than ever before.

Washington County.

Charles A. Spangler has been appointed fire marshal of Hagerstown.

Christopher Keedy, residing on the Mullendore farm, near Rohrersville, had four cows killed by lightning on Monday.

D. G. W. Snyder, near Williamsport has a curiosity in the shape of a small chicken that was hatched with four legs.

Another monument is in course of construction on the Antietam Battlefield. It is by the Twenty-first Massachusetts Regiment.

The Republican primaries in Washington county resulted in a victory for the anti-Cook element, which is friendly to Senator Wellington.

A portion of a cannon was dug up by ditchers in Hagerstown, supposed to be part of a gun which burst on Fourth of July celebration in 1829 and killed George Howard, who was sitting on it. Cannon balls were named in remembrance of the incident.

Charles Lampe, aged about sixty years, of Hagerstown, while walking on a high trestle in Chambersburg at night was struck by a freight train and hurled to the ground, breaking several of his ribs and crushing his shoulder.

The toll-gatherer on the Cearfoss turnpike, Washington county, is again collecting one cent toll from wheelmen after an unsuccessful attempt to do so a year ago. It is contended that the road is still in bad condition.

AN INCENDIARY FIRE.

Frame Barn of Mr. Hiram Stottlemyer, Near Pleasant Walk, Burned.

The frame barn of Mr. Hiram Stottlemyer, west of here, was discovered to be on fire on Saturday morning last together with its contents, consisting of a new Birdsell wagon, a mower, a number of plows, lot of harness, etc. A quantity of hay and other feed was burned.

Mr. Stottlemyer was in Pleasant Walk and the rest of the family were attending the picnic near there when the fire was discovered by Mr. Victor Smith who was on his way to the picnic. Mr Smith tore down some fence between the barn and house and then proceeded to Pleasant Walk where he gave the alarm.

The barn was insured including the contents. The wagon was also insured. The loss of supposed incendiary origin.

Mr. Stottlemyer estimates his loss at $300, which is partly covered by insurance.

MATTERS IN MARYLAND.

In Washington county anti-Wellington delegates to the State convention were elected.

Solomon Truitt, aged 60, and William Pearce, aged 19, are in jail at Chestertown, charged with attempting to assault little girls.

The Chesapeake and Ohio Canal has again posted notices prohibiting all persons from traveling on the towpath.

A passenger train ran over John Robertson near Westminster, and in stopping to pick him up was run into by a freight train, causing some wreckage to cars, but no injury to passengers.

Jethro Robertson was released on bail for court, charged with attempting a felonious assult on a girl, aged ten years, daughter of John H. Parker, of Sharptown, Wicomico county.

Henry Johnson, colored, over seventy years of age, made a murderous assault upon his wife in Howard county and is supposed to have committed suicide.

A Cumberland Sunday night Robert Cowell shot William Long in the right arm and struck John Taylor with a gun. Both of them are badly hurt.

John D. Marshal, of Prince George county, who was shot on Monday, died at Providence Hospital, in Washington, D. C. A colored man is under arrest on suspicion of having murdered him.

A skeleton the skull of which was fractured and the wrists encased in handcuffs was dug up on the premises of Dr. Cocker, Queenstown, the site of the first jail in Queen Anne's prepared in the last century, when Queenstown was the county-seat.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. I. C. Remsburg, of Baltimore, on Wednesday joined his wife and little daughter who were visiting relatives and friends in this place and vicinity. They will return to Baltimore today.

Rev. R. Byrd and little daughter, Pauline, will leave to-day on a visit to his mother who resides in Berkley county, Va.

Miss Nellie Cole, Frederick, spent several days this week with the family of Mrs. Joseph Harp, this place.

Mrs. Lillie Middleton, of Washington, D. C., who is visiting at the home of Mr. Isaiah Butts, near Middletown, spent several days with the family of the editor and other friends in this vicinity, accompanied by her little daughter Grace.

Miss C[illegible] Flook, of Foxville, [illegible] this place, Pleasant Walk.

Mrs. Frank Brining and son Ralph, of West Grove, Pa., accompanied by Mr. Vincent Flook, of Boonsboro, visited Mr. Flook's daughter Mrs. Wm. G. Moser, this place, yesterday.

Has Not Returned.

A number of reports, many of them conflicting, are in circulation over the absence from home of Mr. Aaron Shank, a young farmer of near this place, who left home on Tuesday of last week to go on the excursion from Frederick to Bay Ridge on the following day, and has not returned. He is said to have told parties from here that it was his intention to never return, and we are informed that word has been received from him from Toledo, Ohio. He is also said to have taken with him a large sum of money at least $500 and possibly $700, the proceeds of a portion of the wheat crop. He left here a wife and small child.

Mr. Henry A. Drary's dwelling house in Anne Arundel county was burned.

Joseph Sterling is in Centreville Jail on a charge of felonious assault upon a girl under the age of consent.

TIGER MEN IN AFRICA.

[illegible] fully realize what it means. I had heard about tiger men and their deeds for some years, but they seemed to be a thing of the past until their doings were revived in the spring of 1894.

There is a belief among the natives that if one kills 10 chickens, 10 ducks, 10 goats, 10 children, 10 women and 10 men he will never die, and to gain this desired end people are murdered by wholesale. We lost goats through tiger men in 1893, but as no person was killed no one paid much attention.

The murderer dresses himself in a tiger skin and walks on all fours when over near persons he wishes to kill, but when alone he walks erect. Small [illegible] wolf of his dress [illegible] with which these foul deeds are committed. One morning, in March, 1894, we were told that a little girl and her mother had been killed the previous night. The woman was awakened by some strange noise and found the tiger man trying to carry her child away. She fought for the little girl and was cut so badly that she died before morning. The girl was taken away, and only her hands were found. The rest of the body was carried off. The whole country was aroused, but no one seemed to know who did it.

Not long after a little boy was killed while camping in the forest with a lot of older people to gather palm nuts. As soon as all was quiet again and the natives began to feel safe another case happened, and finally few persons dared to go out after night. During the year 1894, 24 murders came to our attention. One of our former mission boys, a lad of 15, was killed, and only his head was found. We determined then to stop this horrid custom if we could. We inquired of influential men who the murderer was. Every one of them named the same person, or, rather, two persons. We promised that we would not betray the secret and asked the French official what should be done. He authorized us to arrest the tiger men if we could.

We called a big meeting of all the influential men of the country, and of course we sent a special invitation to the tiger men. All the people came, and we soon had the two murderers in our power and sent them to Mayumba. The French agent there kept them locked up a little while and then let them go. It was too much trouble for him to sift the matter, and what did he care if a few more niggers were killed? While this was going on we lost three goats in one night. They were killed by tiger men to show their appreciation of our pay in the matter. The man who had been released never came back to our country, but went away to another district. Our natives were disgusted with the government because these murderers were let go.

Shortly after a woman was killed some six miles from us. We offered the chief our assistance, but he did not seem willing to deliver up the man, although he had been caught in the act. But the man got his deserts soon enough. The woman was leaving her house in the evening with her daughter. Soon the girl called out, "Father, come out! a tiger man is hurting mother." The father came running, picking up a heavy stick as he ran, and he struck the tiger man across the back, disabling him. After awhile the chief and some others took the tiger man into the bush and gave him the "sass" wood poison, and when the man died they threw his body away. The chief told us this was the only way to get rid of the tiger men. There was no use in taking them to the French. Justice would not be meted out to them, and if they were not punished severely they would return and kill more people.

This was indeed the right thing to do, as the event proved. It did frighten other tiger men for a time at least, and we heard nothing more of them while we were in the French Kongo.—New York Sun.

THE BLOODHOUND.

Interesting Facts About One of the Most Interesting of Dogs.

For stateliness of appearance no breed of dog is comparable to the bloodhound, while the stories attending its unerring pursuit of its quarry have furnished the novelists with material of the most exciting character. But it is a fiction to associate the bloodhound with ferocity. He never worries or mangles what he tracks down. His vocation is to find, and to find only, whether engaged in pursuit of man or of wounded deer.

The bloodhound has figured in history from time immemorial, and no breed of dog has preserved its characteristic points so persistently. The high pointed cranium, the long, pendulous ears, the ample dewlap, the wrinkled forehead, the overhanging flews and even the red hazy, or third eyelid, commonly called the scaling wax, may be traced, more or less, in the Talbot hound, the basset, the [illegible] and the [illegible] beagle, which last is a miniature bloodhound, though of lighter build. The Count le Couteulx de Canteleu, in his work "Races des Chiens Courans Français," hatks back to the famous St. Hubert hounds, black and white, as the recognized progenitors of the breed.

The present writer was particularly impressed by the strong bloodhound type which characterized the packs of French hounds from various provinces exhibited at the International show in Paris in 1878. However, it will be more [illegible] to the specialties of succession and [illegible] of facts, the breeding and history of bloodhounds were compulsorily maintained by each hamlet for tracking the mass troopers after their raids, and till comparatively lately the rural constabulary in England employed bloodhounds to trace sheep and poultry stealers. Beside a police superintendent not long ago had a wonderful hound named Veltigem, which could find his master wherever he might be and at any hour of the night. And this reference suggests the inverse remark that the bloodhound, even as a pup, will pick up the trail of a stranger quite easily and, perhaps, more eagerly than that of his master.

Another interesting fact is that the bloodhound [illegible] to [illegible] when the foot of the fugitive has been purposely fouled, and it is a pretty sight to watch a trained hound following his quarry over a fence if the runner has gone that way, or under the rails if such has been his course. The training of bloodhounds has not been very persistently followed of late years, but there have been several important trials at Doncaster, and at the Alexandra Palace, also. It is noteworthy that [illegible] when deep snow was on the ground, that while snow was on the ground the hounds laid on were equally persistent in tracking the quarry. A well trained bloodhound will follow for five miles even after six hours have elapsed since the fugitive started, and although many other trails have crossed the track. But he is frequently at fault over stone flags. It was for this reason that the pursuit of Jack the Ripper by bloodhounds, at one time mooted, was, after a trial, discarded. It was the later Mr. J. Bell's Countess which served as a model to Landseer for his bloodhound in "Dignity and Impudence," and also for his "Sleeping Bloodhound," while the late Sir John Millais' Cromwell figured in more than one of that artist's pictures. Other fine hounds have been Lauth XI, Hector II and Danger. The bloodhound's aristocratic appearance, his invariable good temper and his watchfulness commend him to social notice, while the vulgar idea regarding his ferocity renders him an invaluable companion for ladies and children against the annoyances incidental to the genus tramp.—Sketch.

THE INGLE NOOK AT HOME.

From this one nook the world is fenced away
By four low walls, that bound the realm of home.
Here dwells contentment. Here love and peace hold sway.
Here pride and hate and malice never come.
And when the purring flame dispel the night,
True friends are they that sit within the glow.
Kind eyes shine brighter in the flickering light,
And home's own voices, hushed to cadence low,
Speak—or are silent in a hush that speaks—
Even as the fire upon the hearthstone sings—
Of home, the haven that such mortal seeks;
Of home, the goal of all our wanderings.
And hope's and memory's fairest visions come
To hover o'er the ingle nook at home.

SOME QUEER CUSTOMS.

Mining Camp Dishwashing and Tory Island Tomahawks.

An old camper out once related to a horrified housekeeper his experience of dishwashing in a miners' camp. It did not take much time, though the company was numerous and the utensils of the kitchens were in constant use. The reason why it took but little time he sufficiently indicated by the statement that the cook pot was not cleaned till it became too small to hold a pudding of reasonable size. Then somebody got a hammer and knocked off the hardened accretions from its interior till it was restored nearly enough to its original capacity to render further service.

On Tory Island, an out of the way bit of an Irish islet, and indeed to a less degree throughout Donegal, the natives are not much more dainty in their living, and their habit of letting the grounds remain indefinitely in their teapots has disastrous consequences.

"Every day and all day long," says a recent writer, "the teapot sits stewing in the embers of the hearth, and at each successive brew fresh tea is thrown in, but the old is never thrown out until the pot is choked." The result is an unusual and excessive rate of insanity. Little wonder, when a Tory island boy who was questioned as to his usual meals, could reply:

"Stirabout for breakfast and tay for dinner; tay, av coorse, at taytime and stirabout for supper, whiles we have tay for breakfast instead and stirabout for our dinner, and then another cup of tay before bedtime."

However, this diet, injurious as it is to the nerves, does not seem to affect the muscles. The Tory islanders are a robust and vigorous race, the men averaging 6 feet in height and the women unusually tall and strong. The women indeed have need of all their physical strength, since it is they who do the bulk of the outdoor work, while the men stay at home and spin and weave.

"At Angry Strand, on a Sunday morning," says the same observer, "one may witness a strange sight. At low tide more than a mile of roundabout is saved by wading across a narrow bay. The men include in their Sunday's wardrobe shoes and stockings. The women, by courtesy and custom, wear 'marrigens'—footless stockings, with a loop passing over the toe. Each good wife takes her good man upon her shoulders, and the duroes are conveyed across dry shod."—Youth's Companion.

Her Tribute to Lucy Stone.

Mrs. Mary E. Holmes, the faithful and efficient president of the Illinois Equal Suffrage Association, has been obliged by domestic cares and duties to resign her position. She will [illegible] great regret, but will continue to advise and plan for the cause. In a private letter she writes:

"If dear Lucy Stone was on the earth, I should explain to her first of all why I have resigned my state position. She was and is my inspiration and godmother in suffrage work. She was such a good wife and mother that I feel sure she would tell me to do my duty to the home before any other. I hope I can return to the work at some future time, but now heart and brain must be given to the home and home interests. I shall still do what little I can for our beloved cause and shall watch the battle with great interest."

Wholly Vindictive.

"It is shameful!" exclaimed the actress to whom the manager star owed money. "But I will get even with him some time."

"What do you propose to do—sue him?"

"And give him the benefit of all that advertising? Never!" — Washington Star.

BARBER POLES.

Modern Styles and Decorations — Some Poles Are of Iron.

They are using in the west to some extent now a barber pole of galvanized iron, which has bands and spiral projections, and is painted in the same manner as a wooden pole. Another western pole has four upright strips of iron, around which are wound spirally other iron strips, making a latticed pole. The spiral encircling strips are so painted as to form the usual stripes. There is talk now of aluminum barber poles, which would be much more expensive, but would be of extreme durability and could always be sold at so much a pound.

[illegible] the east the barber poles used are almost all made of wood, and in fact the barber poles everywhere are principally of wood. The wood commonly use is soft maple.

Barber poles are made in various sizes, but standard full size poles are made 6 and 10 feet in length and from 8 to 12 inches in circumference. They are sometimes made 14 inches in circumference, but that is unusual. There is now in force in this city an ordinance requiring that outside barber poles shall be kept within the stoop line, and that they shall not exceed 5 feet [illegible]. Before the adoption of that ordinance the large pole most commonly used in this city was 10 feet in height and 10 inches in diameter. Since the ordinance came into force there has been here an increased use of door poles and window poles, these being very much slenderer, and in the case of the window poles very much slenderer. The door poles stand beside the doorway or entrance. In the case of a basement shop where the poles would be at the beginning of the steps, and so in sight along the sidewalk, they are placed upright. When placed beside a ground floor doorway, they are slanted outward slightly, so that the top projects beyond the building front. The window poles, which are short little poles with a gilded ball at each end, are fixed at an angle to iron brackets secured to the window casing. A barber is likely to use two door poles, one on either side of the door, and he may use window poles also, so that in this city the number of poles used is greater than ever before, though it may be that their aggregate bulk is no larger than that of the smaller number of larger poles that once stood by the curbstones, or were otherwise conspicuously placed.

There have been made barber poles with spiral stripes simulated by stripes painted diagonally on tapering strips of board. Years ago, too, there were poles some barber poles of four strips of board, tapering and nailed together, making an obelisk shaped sign, which was striped in the usual way. But the pole, usually in some simple form, was the common thing, and this developed gradually into the more elaborate pole now commonly used, which is made with perhaps bands or other shapes turned or otherwise fastened upon it, and with greater girths and variety of ornamentation. Pretty much all poles are surmounted by a gilded ball. Other shapes—pear, for instance—have been made for a finish, but the ball is the most popular. With the more elaborate poles, with bands and carvings and panels, and with the spaces of the length more broken up, came more elaborate styles of coloring, and more or less departure from the usual spiral stripes. poles long painted with the conventional colors, but with diamond shapes, and so on. But now, while poles are made as elaborately as ever in shape, there is rather more simplicity of coloring, and the most elaborate of poles are pretty sure to show the spiral striping somewhere, the clear spaces on the pole between the ornamental designs being thus painted.

Less blue is used in stripes than formerly, the stripes being now usually of red and white, and the red generally used is a shade darker than formerly. More gold than ever is now used, the gilding being ornamental. Besides, on the tops it is [illegible] used for stars and other gilded ornamentation, and there are poles of various sizes made with spiral gold stripes on a black body or on a white body. These cost more than poles striped in colors, but the use of them is increasing. More black and gold poles are used in the west, where people seem to spend more money on barber poles than in the east. But everywhere the spiral stripes are the barber's symbol, whether they are painted on a pole specially designed for a sign, or on a telegraph pole, or, as may sometimes be seen in smaller places, around the trunk of a tree.—New York Sun.

Ancient Wills.

The antiquity of legal methods is curiously illustrated by the recent discovery of the oldest will extant. This unique document was unearthed by Professor Petrie at Kahuna, Egypt, and is at least 4,000 years old. It is pleasing to find it singular [illegible] form, and it is said that it might be admitted to probate today.

TO THINK OF FURNITURE is to THINK OF CARTY

It is No Use Trying to find better furniture for the money than Carty sells you. There may be other consideration prompting you to do your buying elsewhere, but it will never be on account of price. A little comparison will prove to you that Carty is ahead in the quality of the goods he offers you and that his price is by far the lowest known here. You will find us prepared to show you the finest line of general household furniture ever brought to Frederick. It was purchased because you wanted that kind, so when you call to get it the place is
